The Ethiopian school leaving certificate examination is administered to students at the end of their secondary education. Prior to 1974, Ethiopia had an estimated illiteracy rate well above 90% and compared poorly with the rest of Africa in the provision of schools and universities. In the early 1900s, before 1974, Ethiopia had an estimated illiteracy rate well above 90 and compared poorly with the rest of Africa in the provision of schools and universities.

In 2001, the Ethiopian Higher Education Entrance Examination (EHEEE) replaced the Ethiopian School Leaving Certificate Examination (ESLCE). The EHEEE is used to determine eligibility for admission to higher education institutions in Ethiopia. To be eligible for admission, students must successfully complete the EHEEE and meet minimum entry requirements for the desired program.

The EHEEE consists of five college-level subjects with a grade of C or higher, including English and Math. Students must also fulfill specific requirements stipulated by the Ministry of Education of Ethiopia. The examination is held annually, and results are released to students who meet the criteria for higher education.

The Ethiopian School Leaving Certificate Examination (ESLCE) was introduced in 1974 and remains a significant milestone for students, as it serves as the gateway to higher education. The practice of using the ESLCE for admitting students to universities and colleges continues to be a crucial part of Ethiopia's education system. The examination tests students' proficiency in the English language and their respective mother tongue languages, typically Chinese, Malay, Tamil, and other languages based on the students' background.

The ESLCE is a critical component of the Ethiopian education system, as many institutions, including universities, rely on the examination results to determine student eligibility for higher education. Students who successfully complete the ESLCE are recognized by the Ministry of Education of Ethiopia and are considered eligible for admission to tertiary education programs.

In the context of global education, the ESLCE is one of many standardized tests used for admission to higher education institutions. Students from Ethiopia who wish to pursue higher education in other countries may have to undergo additional processes such as preparing for standardized tests like the SAT or ACT, obtaining international recognition of their credentials, and adhering to the specific admission requirements of foreign institutions.

This examination is recognized by the Ministry of Education of Ethiopia and is following the national curriculum. It is used to determine eligibility for admission to higher education institutions. The ESLCE is administered annually, and students who meet the criteria for higher education are eligible to pursue college-level studies.
